

Hi, I'm Rahsaan Graham

I'm just like you, but at one point in my life I had no way to prove that.

After college, I moved to Central Florida to teach music. After my seasonal position ended, I had to get a Florida ID to be able to find a new job.

When I went to get my Florida ID, I discovered that my birth certificate listed Johnson as my last name - the name of the father I had never met. But, my Social Security card had the name of my mother - the woman who abandoned me at birth. Because the names didn't match I could not get a Florida ID. Without an ID, I couldn't work, and my wife and I became homeless.

We spent 3 years trying to fix the problem without any luck. One day a friend told us about IDignity. Through their time, money and expertise, IDignity petitioned Pennsylvania to amend my documents, effectively restoring my ability to live again, just like you.
